Sector focus RETAIL

Retailers have panicked and cut their prices earlier, says analyst

Big names 'are under more pressure than ever'

GREG WRIGHT

DEPUTY BUSINESS EDITOR

Email: greg.wright@ypn.co.uk
Twitter: @gregwrightyp

SOME RETAILERS have lost their nerve as they face intense competition over the Christmas shopping season, an analyst warned

As many retailers hoped for bumper orders on Cyber Monday, Dan Wagner, a retail analyst and founder of Powa Technologies, warned that many retailers risked making headlines for the wrong reasons in early 2015.

Mr Wagner highlighted the fact that a number of high-profile retail names went bust after Christmas last year. He warned of the dangers of relying on a discount day, or week, without implementing a longer term strategy.

Mr Wagner said: "Retailers are under more pressure than ever to deliver results, having watched major high street stalwarts like HMV, Jessops and Blockbusters go to the wall earlier this year after poor Christmas trading, they are determined not to join the ever growing number of bankruptcies on the high street.

"Retailers have lost their nerve and cut prices much earlier in the season than previous years, to claw back the 80 per cent of revenues they traditionally rely on getting in these final weeks of the

"Consumers have lost the appetite to pay more than they need to for goods, and empowered by their smartphones and tablets, they are checking prices as they shop.

"With online retailers promising same-day deliveries, the winners are those who can fulfil a shopper's desire as soon as they see the item at the right price."

A massive cash injection on a single day cannot hide a flawed retail strategy. Consumer habits are changing, as mobile commerce helps consumers look for the best bargains and deals, and buy them on the spot. According to Leeds-based Hi-tachi Personal Finance, shoppers will have spent a record £1.5bn. or more than £1m a minute yesterday, as they tried to avoid Christmas queues and stock shortages.

Cyber Monday has become the latest American "tradition" to be embraced by British shoppers. But with the seemingly unstoppa-

SPONSORS' FEATURE

WILL THIS be a happy New Year

Squire Patton Boggs Retail Group,

for Retailers? Matthew Lewis

AS WE enter the peak of the Christmas shopping frenzy, the potential retail winners and losers are already being

Whether it is food and drink sales, electronics or fashion, the

for many retailers battling to win their share of the nation's spend.

apparent is that the real winners over the last few years, with

What has become increasingly next few weeks will be critical and Prew Lumley, from the analyse retail trends.

predicted.

SHOPPING FRENZY: High street retailers are taking desperate measures to attract customers but online shopping is changing our habits.

ble rise of Black Friday, could Cyber Monday become as dated and clunky as the ZX81 computer?

Black Friday - which is the Friday following Thanksgiving Day in the US - was accompanied by unruly scenes in Britain this year, about the rise of consumerism.

Cyber Monday – the first Monday of December - is the day when many people decide to shop around for Christmas presents

Lisa Harrison, head of retail finance at Hitachi Personal Finance, believes shoppers can still make big savings by hitting the web before they venture on to the high street.

It is great to see people helping local businesses to thrive.

Andy Piggott, of TSB

House of Fraser, John Lewis,

Next and Argos being a few is predicted by many to be year's performance.

digital age.

examples, have embraced the Christmas trading in 2014

'unspectacular," and according to Mintel there is likely to be only

The question is, therefore, who will be Christmas 2014 winners?

Will the new click and collect option that House of Fraser has launched in conjunction with

Café Nero, or the Morrisons new

Price Match loyalty card help it

Will the nation sit down to gain an edge on competitors?

fizz, turkey and Christmas pudding from Aldi and Lidl,

a three per cent increase on last

She added: "A lot of this growth is coming from mobile channels, with sales over smartphones and tablets having grown by 138 per cent in 2013, compared with the previous year."

The expansion of click and colgrowth of mobile commerce, with 25 per cent of multichannel retail sales now using this method. Multichannel retailers saw sales grow by 16 per cent last Christ-

Retail analysts from Verdict expect Black Friday to become a permanent fixture in the UK retail calendar, as consumer demands continue to grow.

Verdict's latest research also found that 25 per cent of UK shoppers were planning to buy their Christmas gifts earlier this

Kate Ormrod, a retail analyst at Verdict, said that many consumers had previously held out for bigger discounts in the run up to

MATTHEW LEWIS: Setting up of a new credit union 'is step in or from Marks & Spencer and Waitrose? High street sales have clearly been hard hit, but bricks and mortar retailing remains right direction'.

However, her research indicates that shoppers are more confident that discounts will come through earlier, which has resulted in spending being brought for-

Overall, Verdict expects Christmas retail spending to be strong this year, but not spectacular. According to Verdict, an extra £2.3bn will be spent this Christmas when compared with 2013, reaching a total of £90.7bn.

This festive spending is expected to include £53.6bn on nonfood items, and £37.1bn on food and groceries, as retailers benefit from an improving housing market and rising consumer confi-

Verdict predicts that online retailing will make up £13bn of spending, with click and collect accounting for £1.6bn of online

Small retailers can take heart

Retail sales rally as prices fall

RETAIL SALES staged a surprise rally in October after shoppers were tempted back to the shops by the steepest fall in prices

Sales volumes jumped to a better-than-expected 0.8 per cent in October, compared with (ONS). The key drivers were petrol, clothing and grocery sales, which demonstrates that the ongoing supermarket price war is attracting

Vital for city that sector 'is not seen in isolation'

THE MAN behind the Leeds Trinity shopping development is to become the new president of a Gerald Jennings, who is president elect for Leeds Chamber of Commerce and portfolio director for the North and Scotland at Land Securities, will act as a figure head for the Trinity Club in the city centre.

In his role as president of Trinity Club, Mr Jennings hopes to boost collaboration between the retail, commercial and corporate sectors to aid business growth across the Leeds City Region.

In recent years, he helped steer Land Securities' flagship development, Trinity Shopping Centre

Mr Jennings said: "Retail is just one element of the regeneration of Leeds city centre and it is important that it is not seen in isola-

"We want to support all aspects of commerce in the city and I want business people to feel they have a space close to such a thriving hub where they can come to make their contribution." He added: "As one element of the commercial growth and wealth of Yorkshire we want other strands to be at the heart of the revival of the city. "Centrally located, Trinity Club adjacent to Trinity Church, Boar Lane, offers business people a refuge to work, meet business associates and network, while supporting a good cause." Trinity Club was established by Keith Madeley who previously acted as ambassador for the Leeds Club in Albion Place. Trinity Club which has around 90 members and is located near the Trinity Shopping complex was set up after the Leeds Club decided to stop becoming a members' club in March of last year. It enables businesses to discuss new opportunities, network and use the facilities on offer, such as wifi and meeting rooms. Mr Madeley, who was ambassador of Leeds Club for five years, welcomed Mr Jennings' appointment. He said: "I'm absolutely delighted, because what it does is it gives an extra endorsement to the business community. Mr Madeley told The Yorkshire Post that members of the Trinity Club - many of them small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) had already seen benefits of Mr Jennings' appointment. "Lots of retail outlets particularly in and around the Trinity [shopping development] are offering discounts to Trinity Club members," said Mr Madeley. He added that the prime location of the club, right next to the shopping development was benefitting both the retailers nearby and members of the Trinity Club.

Mr Madeley said: "I want it to be seen as a primary hub for businesses to meet and exchange ideas." He believes with the London market overheating Leeds can benefit. "There's so much opportunity here," he said.

Mr Jennings will also become president of Leeds Chamber of Commerce in 2015.

is just one element of the regeneration of Leeds city centre.'

It may seem that retail is headthe month before when they fell largest fall for 12 years, forced ing towards a virtual world, but down in part by reductions in 0.4 per cent, according to the it's worth remembering that we're still social animals who since 2002.

Office for National Statistics

large majority of sales – even over the Christmas period – tend to be

What is clear is that the clever offline via traditional stores.

retailers use click and collect to make a virtue of both their presence, and to persuade when they pop into store to physical stores and their online shoppers to spend a little more

As Britain is the biggest online shopping nation, it is no surprise that last year over 60 per cent of shoppers purchased some goods or services online over the Christmas period. There is customers.

Over the year, average store petrol prices.

prices fell 1.5 per cent, the Real retail winners are ones who are embracing digital age a key part of most successful no doubt that people like to buy online, but often with the proviso retailers' business. Although there continues to that the delivery and returns be a surge in online sales, the process fit in with busy lives.

What we can be sure of is that in January those who have failed will, at best, be subject to the usual market analysis and share price slump and, at worst, head into administration.

At our Retail Debate on February 3 in Leeds and February 10 in London, industry experts will review 2014 trading and the trends from the results of our Multichannel Survey, which will consider changes in retailer and shopper attitudes to multichannel over the last 12

Looking ahead, there are changes to come next year which will have an impact on retailers, such as the possible demise of pay day lenders following the introduction of a cap on loan rates in January, which will hit many would-be borrowers.

from research carried out by TSB, which indicates that almost two-thirds (65 per cent) of shoppers hope to buy some of their Christmas shopping locally at independent high street shops and markets, rather than high street behalf of TSB, more than half (54 per cent) of the 2,000 respondents said they will shop locally

this Christmas because they want to support their local community.

their neighbourhood because it's

Andy Piggott, of TSB, said: "It is great to see people helping local businesses and communities to thrive by shopping locally this need to feel connected to the world beyond our smartphone.

Christmas."

quicker and more convenient.

A significant number of consumers are deciding to shop in

When quizzed by One Poll on

However, for borrowers who work in the retail sector, help will be at hand with the soonto-be launched credit union, RetailCURe.

Supported by the Retail Trust, Squire Patton Boggs and many of our best-known retailers, the new credit union will enable retailers to ensure that their employees can access trusted. safe and affordable credit, savings and insurance products; a step in the right direction.

SQUIRE PATTON BOGGS

A law firm with local connections and global influence

To find out more contact: John Alderton, Partner, john.alderton@squirepb.com

44 Offices in 21 Countries

2 Park Lane Leeds LS3 1ES

squirepattonboggs.com