Squire Patton Boggs' preeminent Public Policy Practice reputably provides exceptional expertise and unparalleled levels of political analysis to make sure you are heard at the right time, by the right people. We can also help you assess, in advance or in real time, what government policies could affect your business interests. We are proud to have the most experienced and well-recognized public policy practice in the US and internationally. Our presence in nearly all the major capitals spans six continents.

Beginning in May 2018, our team has carefully tracked and compiled data to display current trajectories for the November 2018 midterm election outcomes. Our overview highlights competitive Senate and House races, which will define the 116th Congress but does not attempt to predict the outcome.

The Senate overview provides recent polling and political rankings from Real Clear Politics, Cook Political Report and Sabato's Crystal Ball, while the House overview imparts a general look into more competitive races. Information regarding both chambers is supplemented by previous voter trends in congressional and presidential elections. Our congressional midterm analysis further leverages unique political insight from former Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott (R) and Senator John Breaux (D), co-chairs of the firm's Public Policy Practice.

Additionally, Republicans currently hold a majority in both gubernatorial and attorney general positions throughout the country. We profile several key races for each position and illustrate President Trump's respective endorsements to target where and if the Republican advantage will remain intact.

This overview will be updated, periodically, leading up to November 6 to provide real-time polling information.

The Democrats must flip 23 seats for majority control. Democrats currently have 193 seats; Republicans have the majority with 236 seats and six seats are vacant. There are more than 60 predicted toss-up seats, and reports suggest Democrats have as high as an 84% chance to retake the House majority.

Senate

There are 35 Senate seats up for re-election in 2018. The Democrats must gain two seats to secure the majority. There are 6 toss up races: Arizona, Florida, Indiana, Missouri, Montana and Nevada. Control of the Senate will also depend on notable races in New Jersey, North Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, and West Virginia. Republicans have the current majority with 51 seats, and reports suggest that the party has a 82% chance of maintaining its control.

Gubernatorial

Gubernatorial elections will be held in 36 states and three territories in 2018. There are 10 toss-ups: Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Nevada, Ohio, Oregon and Wisconsin. Republicans currently have the majority of gubernatorial seats with 33.

Attorneys General

There are eight competitive State Attorneys General (AG) races. Key toss-up races are in Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Michigan, Minnesota, Nevada, Ohio and Wisconsin. Republicans hold the majority of State Attorney General positions, with 27 to Democrats 22, with one additional unaffiliated AG.

Leadership

Trent Lott served as Senate Majority Leader and represented Mississippi in Congress for 35 years.

John Breaux served as Democratic Chief Deputy Whip in the US Senate and represented Louisiana for 33 years.

They are co-chairs of Squire Patton Boggs' Public Policy Practice.

While polling provides insight into the election, the determining factor will be voter turnout. We must elect officials who can bring civility back to Congress and work across the aisle to get things done.

Senator John Breaux

No matter how the election turns out, Congress must find a way to get things done for the American People.

Senator Trent Lott

In Michigan, Senator Debbie Stabenow (D) is ahead of challenger John James (R) by 7 points in the latest poll, a decrease from earlier polling.

In West Virginia, Senator Joe Manchin (D) is steadily increasing his lead over Patrick Morrisey (R), with latest polls demonstrating a 16 point advantage.

In Indiana, Senator Joe Donnelly (D) trails challenger Mike Braun (R) by half a point on average, a notable shift from the incumbent's previous 3-point lead.

Entering November, the Republican National Committee and its campaign committees, with $111,751,779 in cash on hand, leads the Democratic National Committee and its House and Senate committees, with $98,551,565 in cash on hand.

Several House races across the country are narrowing, with key races in Arizona, California, Florida, New Mexico, Texas. Notable races include:

AZ-02: Former Rep. Ann Kirkpatrick (D) leads opponent Lea Marquez Peterson (R) by 11 points.

KY-06: Rep. Andy Barr (R) leads challenger Amy McGrath (D) by 1 point.

NM-02: Yvette Herrell (R) holds a 1 point lead over Xochitl Torres Small (D).

TX-32: Rep. Pete Sessions (R) holds a narrow 1 point lead over challenger Colin Allred (D).

Hurricane Michael left portions of the Florida Panhandle without electricity, complicating voter turnout initiatives, pre-election polling and absentee balloting.

After Hurricane Andrew in 1992, the Governor of Florida was given authority to change the date of state, though not federal, elections under an emergency power.

Historically, the party of a newly elected president has suffered an average loss of 23 seats in the House in the following midterm. Due to this trend, more House seats that are currently held by Republican incumbents are expected to be in play.

Democrats have comprised the House minority since 2010. They must gain a minimum of 23 seats, and secure the existing 193 seats along with two Democratic vacated seats, to retake the majority.

According to the The New York Times, 25 Republican seats lie in territories won by Hillary Clinton in the 2016 presidential election.

Additionally, many incumbents chose to retire as opposed to running for reelection. Because incumbents generally amass more contributions and run stronger campaigns, Democrats are entering the midterm elections with a greater advantage than they may have otherwise had.

If the Democrats regain the House, it is highly probable former Speaker Nancy Pelosi regains the Speaker's gavel, becoming the first Speaker since Sam Rayburn to hold the office for nonconsecutive terms.

If the Republicans retain a majority, House Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy and House Majority Whip Steve Scalise are favored candidates for Speaker, with other Members, such as Jim Jordan (R-OH), having declared candidacies.
