Introduction

This Privacy Notice describes the ways in which Squire Patton Boggs, through its United Kingdom, European Union and Switzerland branch offices and legal entities ("our UK, EU and Switzerland Offices") listed in Annex 1, processes and protects the personal data of our clients, individuals related or adverse to our clients and other business contacts in accordance with Applicable Data Protection Laws.

[More information \[1\]](#)

As an international law firm, we take very seriously our legal, professional and ethical duties and obligations to protect personal data. We have a robust information security management program in place to protect the personal data and other information that we process and have achieved ISO:27001 certification of the firm's technical and organisational controls across a broad spectrum of systems and processes. These measures are monitored, reviewed and regularly enhanced in order to meet our professional responsibilities and the needs of our clients.

6. Records Retention Policy

Our UK, EU and Switzerland Offices (and other Squire Patton Boggs offices that are recipients of personal data received from them) retain personal data only for as long as necessary for the purposes for which the data was collected, except where necessary to meet our legal obligations (for example, in relation to AML requirements) or in order to establish, exercise or defend potential legal claims or to pursue our legitimate interests.

7. Individuals' Rights in Relation to Their Personal Data

The Applicable Data Protection Law provides certain rights to data subjects in relation to their personal data under certain circumstances. These include the rights to:

Access	Request details about and a copy of the personal data we hold about them.	More information [28]
Rectification	Correct or update their personal data.	More information [29]
Portability	Port personal data that the data subject has provided to us, in machine readable format.
Erasure	Erase the data that we hold about them.	More information [30]
Restriction	Restrict processing in some cases.	More information [31]
Objection	Object to processing in some cases.	More information [32]
Consent	Decline to consent or withdraw consent.	More information [33]

These rights are not absolute and are subject to various conditions under applicable data protection and privacy legislation and the laws and regulations to which we are subject in the performance of legal services.

In some cases, the exercise of these rights (for example, erasure, objection, restriction or the withholding or withdrawing of consent to processing) may make it impossible for us to achieve the purposes identified in Section 3 of this Privacy Notice and provide effective legal services.

Any individual wishing to assert their rights under the Applicable Data Protection Laws should address the relevant request to:

MORE INFORMATION

- [1] Squire Patton Boggs is a global law firm operating under a Swiss verein structure that comprises Squire Patton Boggs (UK) LLP, Squire Patton Boggs (US) LLP and other constituent legal entities. A full description of our organisation listing all of our offices worldwide is provided in our Legal Notices page.

Back

We provide legal services primarily to corporate clients. The types of personal data that we process are those necessary for us to provide our clients with effective legal representation locally, regionally and globally and to carry out various ancillary activities.

- [2] Our UK, EU and Switzerland Offices are branch offices of, or are otherwise associated with, either Squire Patton Boggs (UK) LLP or Squire Patton Boggs (US) LLP. These are listed in Annex 1 to this Privacy Notice.

Back

If you are a client of one or more of our UK, EU and Switzerland Offices, or an individual related or adverse to one of our clients, the relevant data controller is the Squire Patton Boggs legal entity retained by our client. If you contract with our UK, EU and Switzerland Offices in any other capacity, your data controller will be the Squire Patton Boggs entity with which you contract.

For cross-border matters, and in relation to personal data shared by several of our UK, EU and Switzerland Offices, the relevant entities may operate as joint controllers that will collaborate with one another, as necessary, to comply with our obligations under the Applicable Data Protection Laws, including to address requests by data subjects to exercise their rights, as set out in Section 7.

- [3] The core business of Squire Patton Boggs is the provision of legal services to corporate clients and does not involve the large-scale processing of personal data. Squire Patton Boggs has nonetheless elected to appoint a DPO who acts on behalf of all of our UK, EU and Switzerland Offices in order to support our firmwide data protection compliance efforts.

Back

Please direct all general communications or queries relating to this Privacy Notice or the firm's compliance with Applicable Data Protection Laws to our DPO. With regard to the exercise of data subject rights under the Applicable Data Protection Laws, a specific email address is provided in Section 7.

- [4] The information that we collect and process in relation to our clients for the purposes of providing legal services to them is primarily company data and business information.

Back

In some cases, it may be necessary for us to process personal data specific to the matter at hand in order to properly advise and act for our clients. It is not possible to identify every potential category of personal data that we may process as lawyers acting for our clients, since these are as diverse as the legal issues that we are retained to address. The most typical categories are identified in the tables, along with the relevant sources, purpose and lawful bases for processing.

Where we obtain personal data from a client in relation to connected individuals or adverse parties, or other third-party data that is subject to the Applicable Data Protection Law, we do so on the basis that our client has satisfied its own obligations as a controller in its own right in relation to the collection, processing and transfer of such personal data to us.

In many cases, it would be impossible, or would require disproportionate effort on our part, to provide notice of processing directly to these third parties. In most circumstances, we will in any event be subject to a legal obligation of professional secrecy in relation to client data that are entrusted to us and, therefore, are not permitted to inform the relevant data subjects of our data processing.

[5] In order to provide, charge for and manage the delivery of legal services and communicate with our corporate clients in relation to the same, it is in our legitimate interests as a law firm, and those of our clients, to process personal data relevant to the legal services we provide them. When we are retained by individual clients, we process their data as necessary for us to provide legal services under the terms of our engagement with them and comply with relevant local bar rules.

The categories of personal data that we process for this purpose, which our clients usually provide to us, include the following:

- Business contact details of clients (the individual business contact's name, position, company affiliation, physical and email addresses, telephone numbers, etc.) – for purposes of communication in relation to our provision of legal services to them;
- Bank account details and related personal data necessary for us to make and receive payments – in order to receive or pay out transaction completion monies or other transaction-related funds such as disbursements, to pay court fees, and to invoice our clients and receive payment; and
- Account management information (which may include financial or account performance data related to individuals) – to enable us to assess the provision of our services to clients, for our own internal administrative purposes or at the request of our clients.

[6] We may process third-party data as necessary for the provision of legal services to our clients. This information may include personal data about a client's individual employees, customers or suppliers or about individuals employed or otherwise associated with an adversary or counterparty. We may obtain this information from our clients, from public sources or from third parties, depending on the relevant circumstances. For example:

- In corporate or litigation matters, we may need to process the personal data of, or sent to us by, transactional counterparties or opponents in proceedings involving our clients, emails sent to or from employees of our clients or counterparties, and biographical data concerning witnesses and prospective witnesses and legal and other advisers to such third parties.
- Where it is necessary for our lawyers to review large numbers of documents in relation to litigation matters or investigations, we may use automated systems to help us identify documents of interest, which may contain personal data.

[7] In some cases, the client personal data or third-party data that we process in relation to a particular matter may involve the processing of special categories of personal data where relevant to the legal issues involved (for example, in connection with immigration proceedings, data protection, pensions, health and safety regulation or labour and employment matters). The lawful basis upon which we process such data will depend on the circumstances of each case, and may be carried out on the basis that the processing is:

Back

- Necessary for the establishment, exercise of defence of legal claims;
- Based on the explicit consent of the individual concerned; or
- Based on personal data which are manifestly made public by the data subject.

[8] For these purposes, it may be necessary for us to obtain various types of information from the relevant individuals themselves or the potential client with which they are associated. The information required may include:

Back

- Identification documentation such as passports and national identity cards;
- Personal contact details such as home address and other contact details;
- Employment status and history;
- Credit history; and

- Other information as necessary to complete required background checks.

Where necessary, and as authorized by applicable law, we may also need to collect information pertaining to alleged criminal offenses or convictions of individuals related to the potential client.

The personal data is used to determine whether we are prohibited by applicable laws from engaging with the client or to identify and evaluate any risks associated with the individual's economic circumstances, reliability or behavior. Depending on the outcome, we may elect, or be required, to decline to enter into a client relationship.

[9] To complete the required background checks, we may also rely on third-party sources such as:

Back

- Credit rating agencies;
- Identity verification agencies;
- Publicly accessible sources such as public registers and publicly available internet sites; and
- Subscription services that provide screening against lists of politically exposed persons and prohibited and/or sanctioned persons identified by the UK, EU or Swiss governments.

[10] This data may be obtained directly from the individuals concerned as well as from public sources and third-party subscription services or credit vetting agencies.

Back

[11] In most cases, we have a legal obligation to process limited amounts of personal data in order to perform "conflict checks" before incepting clients. Such conflict checks may be required by various laws, regulations and "best practice" ethical guidelines to which Squire Patton Boggs, as a law firm, is subject. These checks may sometimes involve the processing of personal data about individuals related or adverse to our clients, such as records of litigation in which they are involved, board memberships or shareholdings. We may obtain this information from the individuals concerned, from public sources or from subscription services such as legal directories.

Back

[12] In circumstances where a legal obligation does not apply, we have a mutual legitimate interest with our clients to ensure that our services are provided free from any conflicts of interest, and rely on our clients to ensure that the individuals involved receive proper notice.

Back

[13] For the purposes of dealing with suppliers, it is in our legitimate interests and those of our vendors for us to process the business contact details of the vendors' individual account representatives in order to communicate and otherwise conduct business with them.

Back

The information that we typically process for this purpose is provided by the vendor and includes the appointed business contact's:

- Name
- Position
- Company affiliation
- Physical and email addresses
- Telephone numbers.

[14] It is in our legitimate interest as a law firm to collect and process business contact data needed to provide requesting clients and contacts with copies of our newsletters on legal developments covering different practice areas, client alerts, blogs, invitations to seminars, online webinars and similar events that we offer and other marketing materials, where we believe this may be of interest.

Back

The personal data that we collect for these purposes includes the following:

- Business contact details, such as name, address, email address, phone number, company name, company address, title or position;
- Individuals' subscription preferences. Where relevant, information provided by these individuals about their preferences in relation to receiving updates from us on developments in particular practice areas and industry sectors, firm-sponsored events and the like.
- Event registration details, such as name, company name, title or position, and email address.

We generally obtain the business contact details and preference information that we use for marketing communications and business development activities directly from our clients or prospects. This includes visitors to our website, who may register online to opt-in to receiving client alerts, newsletters, invitations to events and other information from us.

We may also obtain your business contact details and information about your preferences in regard to the subject matter of newsletters and other materials or events that we offer when you provide us with your business card at conferences that we sponsor or network with our lawyers and staff at meetings or events.

We obtain the consent of prospective clients and others with whom we do not have an existing client relationship before sending them our marketing materials by electronic means, where required by applicable electronic marketing communications rules. We have in place an effective online tool for users to manage requests to opt out or modify their preferences in relation to the subject matter and categories of information they receive.

[15] We collect business contact data to record information about our business development and marketing activities, such as meetings and other interactions with clients and prospective clients. The personal data that we collect for these purposes includes the date and time of business interactions, notes of the meetings or events.

Back

[16] We use audio and video conferencing services provided by third parties for the purposes of providing legal advice, training, client service and to deliver webinars. In some cases, we may record a call for evidentiary purposes or memorialise a webinar for further training use. In such cases, we will notify the participants that the call is being recorded. Depending on the circumstances, the lawful basis for recording the call will be either the participants' consent or to provide evidence of a business communication.

Back

[17] Transfers of personal data between and among our UK, EU and Switzerland Offices (see Annex 1), as well as with lawyers in other offices of the firm, may be necessary in order to deliver legal services to our clients efficiently and effectively or at the request of our clients. For example, a particular matter may involve legal issues or proceedings in multiple jurisdictions, and in these cases, we may share personal data relating to the matter amongst selected Squire Patton Boggs colleagues based in our offices around the world, unless we are instructed otherwise by our client in relation to a particular matter. These cross-border transfers within the firm are governed by intra-group controller arrangements and processor agreements, as appropriate.

Back

[18] Other firm functions that involve the transfer of client-related and business contact personal data to selected members of management and staff located in our offices within and outside the UK, EU and Switzerland include financial management, client billing, firm management and administration.

Back

[19] Marketing data containing UK, EU and Swiss business contact details and client preferences in regard to legal developments in specific practice areas, client alerts, newsletters and events are accessible by selected members of the Squire Patton Boggs marketing team and may be shared with lawyers working in offices outside the UK, EU and Switzerland. Client-related and business contact information collected in the course of networking and business development activities may be shared among lawyers and staff in our UK, EU and Switzerland

Offices and collaboratively with colleagues in Squire Patton Boggs offices around the globe.

- [20] Subject to the client's prior authorization, our contentious practice sometimes relies on e-discovery software that is operated by an expert team with the firm that is based in the United States and virtual data rooms that are hosted on the firm's United States servers. Back
- [21] For security purposes (in particular back-up and failover), all client data, which may include personal data, within the UK, EU and Switzerland are stored on servers based in the UK and mirrored on Squire Patton Boggs servers located in the United States, where certain firmwide applications are hosted. Back
- [22] Our UK, EU and Switzerland Offices also share personal data with trusted suppliers and business partners pursuant to our contractual arrangements. The data recipients include, for example, IT service providers, marketing and events management platforms, telecommunications operators, banking institutions, data room administrators, document review service providers, credit vetting agencies, background check firms, legal directories, third-party consultants or experts, local counsel, barristers, opposing counsel, auditors, and professional indemnity insurers together with their appointed legal and other advisors. If requested by our clients, this may also include e-billing and matter management platform services providers. Back
- [23] We may also share personal data collected for the purposes of client retainers with external recipients in circumstances where we have a legal obligation to do so, including but not limited to courts, tribunals, regulatory authorities, tax authorities and law enforcement. Back
- [24] We provide information, which may include personal information to Experian, a credit reference agency (CRA) and they will give us information about you, such as about your financial history. We do this to assess creditworthiness, check your identity, manage your account, trace and recover debts and prevent criminal activity. We will also continue to exchange information about you with Experian on an ongoing basis, including about your settled accounts and any debts not fully repaid on time. CRAs will share your information with other organisations. The identities of the CRAs, and the ways in which they use and share personal information, are explained in more detail at <http://www.experian.co.uk/crain/index.html>. Back
- [25] In order to manage the preferences of our clients, website visitors and other business contacts efficiently and maintain the accuracy of the data we collect, we utilize third-party marketing and events management platforms and other solutions. Back

- [26] It may be necessary for our UK, EU and Switzerland Offices from time to time to share client data with potential merger partners located in countries outside the UK, EU and Switzerland in cases where negotiations have reached a reasonably advanced stage. Any personal data that may be transferred to a potential merger partner will be limited to that which is necessary for the transaction to proceed, and will be safeguarded by protective contractual measures, including the EU SCCs where required. Back
- [27] Courts, tribunals, government authorities and related parties or counterparties with whom we share personal data, the third-party vendors identified in Section 4 and business partners are in some cases located outside the UK, EU and Switzerland. Unless the recipients are located in countries that have been deemed adequate by the European Commission, we put in place data transfer agreements based on the applicable EU SCCs, the UK Addendum or the Swiss Addendum or rely on other available data transfer mechanisms (Binding Corporate Rules, approved Certifications or Codes of Conduct) to protect the personal data so transferred. In exceptional cases, we may rely on statutory derogations for international data transfers. Back
- [28] The right of access applies only to the extent this is not in breach of a legal obligation of professional secrecy to which we are subject in relation to client data entrusted to us and that would, therefore, prevent us from informing the relevant data subjects. Back
- [29] The right to rectification applies only to the extent this is not in breach of a legal obligation of professional secrecy to which we are subject in relation to client data entrusted to us. Back
- [30] The right to erasure applies in some cases and only to the extent this is not in breach of a legal obligation of professional secrecy to which we are subject in relation to client data entrusted to us. Back
- [31] The right to restriction or objection applies in some cases, and only to the extent this is not in breach of a legal obligation of professional secrecy to which we are subject in relation to client data entrusted to us. Back
- [32] The right to object may be exercised: Back
- Based on grounds relating to the individual's particular situation, where the processing is based on the legitimate interest of Squire Patton Boggs or our clients; or
 - Where personal data is being processed for direct marketing purposes.

[33] Where consent is the basis for processing their personal data, the individual may decline to give their consent, or withdraw consent to the processing at any time.
