About Alison

Alison LaBruyere leverages her prior experience as general counsel to provide legal and regulatory counsel to private and public companies and their boards on a broad range of issues.

Her practice focuses on transactional, regulatory and compliance matters in the financial services industry. She counsels clients on mergers and acquisitions and other strategic combinations and investments, represents them in a full range of financings and securities offerings and compliance, and provides advice on corporate governance issues. She also has extensive experience in a variety of compliance and labor and employment issues.

Alison was executive vice president and general counsel for a diversified financial services holding company owning a regional community bank, traditional consumer finance company and an online consumer finance company. As general counsel, she provided strategic advice and gained broad experience in corporate, regulatory and securities law, including business transactions, mergers and acquisitions, securities offerings and corporate governance. She started her legal career as an associate with an AmLaw 100 law firm based in Atlanta, Georgia.
