About Anthony

Anthony Vinci is a technology and national security leader with deep experience at the intersection of artificial intelligence (AI), defense and finance.

He previously served as chief technology officer for a major US intelligence agency, where he led AI, cybersecurity and emerging technology initiatives supporting critical national security missions. He also played a key leadership role in a Department of Defense AI modernization program that transformed how advanced technology is integrated into military operations.

Anthony is the CEO of an AI company that supports judgment and decision-making in finance and national security through quantitative forecasting and scenario enumeration, providing advanced analytical tools to senior leaders navigating uncertainty, risk and strategic planning.

In the private sector, Anthony has held senior executive roles focused on national security-related investment strategy, global macro analysis and the commercialization of frontier technologies. His work spans operational leadership, organizational transformation and the deployment of emerging technologies in mission-critical environments.

He is the author of The Fourth Intelligence Revolution: The Future of Espionage and the Battle to Save America (Henry Holt and Company, 2025), a major work analyzing how AI and global strategic competition are reshaping the future of intelligence and national security.

Anthony's combination of government leadership, deep technical expertise, and private sector strategic experience makes him a uniquely valuable advisor to clients engaged in defense innovation, AI adoption, technology strategy and national security risk management.
