About Ayesha

Ayesha Corrine Singh is a partner in the firm's financial services regulatory and funds team. Ayesha specialises in fund formation and regulatory matters within the financial services sector, with a deep expertise in asset management.

Based in London, Ayesha is a highly skilled financial services lawyer with extensive experience in UK, EU, and global regulatory frameworks. Drawing on significant in-house legal experience at asset management firms, she brings a pragmatic, commercially minded approach to regulatory and fund structuring challenges.

Ayesha has led complex regulatory projects and provides strategic advice to investment banks, asset managers and alternative investment funds on cross-border licensing, product governance and regulatory implementation. Her expertise spans fund formation, distribution strategies and corporate restructuring, with a particular focus on navigating evolving regulatory landscapes and market practices.

Before joining us, Ayesha practised at a leading international law firm and held senior legal counsel roles at top asset managers, where she played a key role in Brexit-related regulatory transitions, environmental, social and governance (ESG) regulatory implementation, and launching innovative fund structures across multiple jurisdictions (onshore and offshore). This background has been instrumental in developing her ability to align legal advice closely with business objectives and operational realities. Ayesha combines deep regulatory knowledge with a collaborative style to deliver practical solutions that support clients' strategic goals.
