About Ben

Ben Williams is a corporate and commercial lawyer with experience in the energy and resources industries and associated infrastructure, including networks and pipelines. Ben originally trained and worked as a statistician for the Western Australian electricity market operator before becoming involved in electricity market design and, later, completing his law degree.

Ben is regularly involved in corporate transactions, advising on competition/antitrust issues, providing specialist advice in relation to regulated and non-regulated infrastructure assets and energy and trading markets, particularly power and gas, in which he acts for asset owners, users and regulators.
