About David

David Gueye is an associate in the firm's Corporate Practice Group, where he advises clients on a broad range of corporate and transactional matters.

David earned his J.D. from Washington University School of Law. During law school, he served as a peer academic advisor, a student attorney in the Immigration Law Clinic and both staff editor and primary editor of the Washington University Global Studies Law Review. He also gained valuable judicial experience as a judicial extern to the Honorable Audrey G. Fleissig of the US District Court for the Eastern District of Missouri, where he further developed his legal research, writing and analytical skills. In addition, David served as a legal extern, advising on a variety of corporate and operational matters.

Before pursuing a legal career, David built a strong foundation in public health, research and data analytics. As an epidemiologist, he contributed to epidemiological studies and outbreak investigations aimed at identifying and addressing critical public health issues. His work involved analyzing complex data, preparing reports and presentations for key stakeholders and contributing to the Annual Report of Infectious Diseases. Through these experiences, he developed the ability to translate complex information into clear, practical insights and recommendations, a skill that continues to inform his approach to client service.

David earned both a Master of Public Health and a Bachelor of Arts in Sociology from Case Western Reserve University. Drawing on his multidisciplinary background in law, public health, research and data analytics, he brings a thoughtful and strategic perspective to helping clients navigate complex business and legal challenges.
