About Feier

Feier Wu focuses on serving clients in policy areas covering foreign affairs, trade and technology.

Her primary role involves keeping a close watch on the evolving dynamics of US-China relations and monitoring US congressional bills concerning China. Part of her responsibilities include assessing how shifts in US-China trade relations affect industries within China.

Feier earned her master's degree from Georgetown University, where she delved into quantitative research spanning both domestic and international policies. She employed data-driven methodologies, particularly in the realm of China studies.
