About Francesco

Francesco Liberatore is the EMEA lead of our Automotive & Transportation Industry Group.

He advises clients on all aspects of the application of competition law, in particular in technology-driven and digital economy sectors. His experience also focuses on communications law and he coordinates the firm's EMEA Communications Practice.

He regularly represents clients in investigations before regulatory and competition authorities, as well as managing internal investigations, dawn raids and counseling on compliance issues and various commercial agreements. Francesco handles merger control due diligence and filings, as well as coordinating multijurisdictional merger control strategies. He also advises private equity investors, banks and other financial investors on arbitrage opportunities. Francesco's litigation experience includes representing clients in matters before the Competition Appeal Tribunal, the High Court of Justice and the European Courts.

Francesco is dual qualified in England/Wales and Italy. He has authored several legal publications, including the International Telecommunications Law Handbook (Juris Publishing) and the EU Electronic Communications Code Handbook (Bloomsbury Professional), and is a contributing author to the LexisPSL TMT Practice Note on Radio Spectrum Regulation. He is also a regular speaker on topical issues affecting digital markets, including on AI.

Francesco has been named among the top 10 most influential competition lawyers in the digital markets and communications sector in the UK by an independent review (Business Review). He is also recommended as a leading practitioner in Chambers & Partners, Legal 500 and Who's Who Legal. Clients describe him as "thoroughly efficient and helpful throughout", "a true master of telecoms law", "a delight to work with", "very good – very knowledgeable and responsive", "provides timely advice in a practical and risk-based manner" and "really stands out as a brilliant lawyer, who is always dedicated to his client's cause". Following outstanding client feedback, he was named as a star lawyer in the Acritas Stars™ global database: Francesco is praised by clients for "the regulatory advice that he provides to us. He appears to have good relationships with the regulators and his advice has enabled us to achieve our business outcomes".
