About Graeme

Graeme Bradley co-leads our Construction practice and was previously a partner at a major international law firm for 15 years where he had been head of the engineering and construction practice since 2000. Specialising in both contentious and non-contentious work throughout his career, Graeme has advised on documentation for major construction projects ranging from private client developments to major process plants in various sectors with particular interest in energy oil and gas process engineering projects.

Graeme advises primarily owners, both corporate and government, major contractors and capital funds.

He is familiar with all major contract forms including the NEC/ECC, FIDIC, IChemE, Model Form MF/1 – 4, JCT and ICE forms, EPC contracts as well as tailored contracts in sectors including energy, mixed-use facilities, leisure, process plants, ports, materials handling equipment, oil and gas facilities and transport.

Throughout his career Graeme has practiced all aspects of heavyweight construction dispute resolution including UK and international arbitration, litigation and bespoke dispute methods including dispute review/adjudication boards and alternative dispute resolution on major projects.

Graeme is an accredited mediator, having conducted many successful mediations as mediator, and also has been appointed in many disputes as an adviser.
