About Katherine

Katherine (Katie) Catanese is a partner in our Restructuring and Insolvency Practice Group, where she advises distressed companies on strategically solving financial issues they face, recognizing that not every company in distress needs to file bankruptcy and each solution must be tailored made to fit the particular company's specific needs. In this regard, she focuses on non-bankruptcy alternatives as well, including Article 9's, assignments for the benefit of creditors, wind-downs, receiverships and out of court sales.

In addition to working with troubled companies, she represents funds, creditors and investors, as well as other parties in fraud-related litigation within the insolvency space, especially in the cross-border space. Katie has significant experience in filing Chapter 15s and representing liquidators, lenders and creditors, both domestically and abroad, with issues they face in various insolvency situations. Her work often involves litigating jurisdictional disputes, cross-border claims issues, fraudulent transfers and alter ego claims at the intersection of US and offshore entities.

She also has represented numerous domestic and foreign insurance companies and related entities in disputes arising in distressed situations, including selling assets of distressed companies with collateral protection insurance and complex proof of claim disputes.

Katie also helps clients maximize asset value through in- and out-of-court sales, and counsels creditors on distressed debt issues, including representation of creditors in various cryptocurrency bankruptcies.

Additionally, Katie is deeply committed to pro bono work. She has contributed to nationwide innocence projects and advocates for low-income women in family law matters, reflecting her dedication to access to justice.
