About Kerry

Kerry has more than 20 years' domestic and international experience in intellectual property law. He has represented the owners of many of the world's most iconic brands from a variety of industry sectors, including entertainment, fashion, sports, healthcare, beauty, science, finance, manufacturing, retail and wholesale.

Kerry's experience has been international and he has regularly worked for clients on their intellectual property matters in the European Union, North America, Latin America, the Middle East, China, Hong Kong and South East Asia. His practice focusses principally on brand protection issues, both contentious and non-contentious.

Kerry's expertise covers international brand management, protection and enforcement. This includes global branding strategies; pre-filing trade mark clearance, filing and prosecution throughout the world; worldwide contentious registry proceedings that include trade mark revocation, invalidity and opposition actions; trade mark licensing; settlement, co-existence agreements and dispute resolution. In addition, he advises on matters relating to copyright, designs and passing off.

On the commercial side of his practice, Kerry has prepared and negotiated a wide variety of IP, eCommerce, non-disclosure and related agreements – for websites, software, co-branding, co-existence, celebrity endorsements, film locale, image release, prior rights, etc. Kerry also advises on domain name issues, social media, anti-counterfeiting, data privacy and IP due diligence in M&A transactions.
