About Meghan

Meghan Quinn is an experienced, results-oriented litigator.

She represents clients in a variety of complex commercial and civil litigations, including consumer class actions, multidistrict litigation (MDL) proceedings, finance and privacy-related matters, bankruptcy-related litigations, product liability and mass tort cases, construction claims, and commercial contract disputes. She defends clients in state and federal proceedings throughout the country and has been an integral part of federal trial teams.

Meghan is a skilled advocate in every stage of litigation, from pre-filing investigations, discovery, and motions practice, through trial, post-trial practice, and appeals. She has achieved case dismissals, compelled arbitrations, facilitated early settlements, and obtained other significant victories for clients through her motions practice. Her success derives from her ability to refine complex legal issues and fact patterns, and turn them into persuasive arguments that are tailored to align with the client's distinct needs and business objectives.
