About Ololade

Ololade Bello is an associate in the Intellectual Property & Technology Practice, based in the firm's Cleveland office. His practice focuses on Intellectual Property (IP) litigation and representing clients at various stages of patent prosecution.

Ololade's technical background includes working as both a corporate valve and programs engineer during his co-ops with a leading US energy provider. In this capacity, he created programs to track the thermal performance of equipment and validate calculations, as well as assisted in implementing advanced pattern recognition software to maximize the company's performance monitoring.

Throughout law school, Ololade served on the diversity and inclusion board and as Vice President of the Black Law Student Association.
