About Thiago

Thiago de Aragão is a global political risk strategist who advises leaders at the highest levels of government and industry on geopolitics, economic strategy and Latin America's evolving position in global competition. His work spans Latin America, the US, Europe and Asia, with a particular focus on China-Latin America relations, as well as the political and economic dynamics shaping the region.

Thiago has advised heads of state, cabinet officials, CEOs, board chairs and both sovereign and private investors on navigating complex political environments, assessing strategic risk and shaping government engagement across Brazil and the broader region. He brings deep relationships throughout Latin America's political, business and policy communities, giving clients direct insight into decision-making at the highest levels.

Thiago's ability to connect global geopolitical trends with on-the-ground realities makes him an indispensable advisor for clients operating, investing or seeking strategic advantage in some of the world's most complex and consequential political landscapes.
