About Thomas

Thomas Lloyd is a senior associate who focuses on commercial litigation, handling matters in both state and federal courts. He is involved in all stages of litigation, including discovery, dispositive and pre-trial motions, and trial preparation.

Prior to joining our team, Thomas worked at a litigation boutique in San Francisco, where his practice focused on real estate, construction and antitrust litigation. He also successfully represented commercial developers, construction contractors and title insurance companies.

Thomas graduated magna cum laude from the University of California, Hastings College of the Law, where he worked with early-stage tech companies as a participant in the Startup Legal Garage. He obtained his undergraduate degree in Politics from the University of California, Santa Cruz.

Experience

- Represented corporate opt-out companies in an antitrust case involving the alleged manipulation of global aluminum markets.
- Represented general contractors and bond companies in claims and payment disputes involving government, commercial and multi-unit residential projects.
- Successfully defended a subdivision developer in a multimillion-dollar real estate dispute.
- Represented a putative class in an antitrust case, challenging price fixing in foreign exchange markets.
